Town crafting response to reload facility approval

By STEPHEN BJORK

WILMINGTON - Town officials held an administrative meeting last Thursday to develop a response to the Surface Transportation Board's preliminary environmental approval for New England Transrail's plan to construct a reload facility on the Olin Chemical property at 51 Eames Street.

The Surface Transportation Board's (STB) Section of Environmental Analysis (SEA)

offered preliminary approval to the proposal in its recently released Environmental Assessment, despite voluminous documentation outlining various environmental problems submitted by the town in response to the initial application.

"The overriding conclusion that all of us attending the meeting came to, including town counsel, was that the Environmental Assessment was very dismissive without any basis of our prior environmental comments," said Assistant Town Manager Jeffrey Hull.

Daniel Deutsch, of Wilmington's Town Counsel Deutsch, Williams, Brooks, DeRensis & Holland, P.C. (DWBDH), attended the meeting with Hull, nearly all of the town's Department Heads, and Selectmen Michael Newhouse and Suzanne Sullivan.

Newhouse described the two-hour meeting as very productive, but he realizes that the town is in for a difficult battle.

"These cases are very difficult," Newhouse said. "This is a federal exemption. I've categorized it before as being like a 40B on steroids."

Hull has similar concerns.

"This appears to be an uphill battle, as part of the STB's mandate is to promote rail

Olin cleanup may become federal priority

State reaches impasse with chemical company

By STEPHEN BJORK

WILMINGTON - The Massachusetts Department of Environmental Protection (DEP) has begun the process of listing the Olin Chemical site at 51 Eames Street as a National Priorities List (NPL) site.

The Olin site was classified as a Tier 1A Disposal Site on September 20, 1994, as the result of the discharge of waste water to unlined lagoons and ditches by previous property owners during a period of many years. Tier 1A Sites, which are overseen by the DEP, are categorized as such only if it possesses contaminants that impact a town's water supply.

DEP, however, has recently encountered an apparent impasse in their dealings with Olin. DEP Section Chief Stephen Johnson's August 23, 2004 letter to the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency's (EPA) Nancy Smith requests the consideration of placing the Olin site on the NPL for that reason.

"DEP feels that the NPL listing is necessary and appropriate at this time because DEP has been unable to reach an agreement with Olin Corporation on a strategy to aggressively clean up the extensive groundwater contamination at the site, which has resulted in the closure of five public water supply wells in the Town of Wilmington's Maple Meadow Brook Aquifer," Johnson wrote.

Assistant Town Manager Jeffrey Hull is not entirely convinced that the EPA will be able to provide a better response than the DEP.

"From my perspective, it is unclear to what this will mean going forward," Hull said. "There has been a lot of criticism about the way DEP has handled this site over the years, and recent budget cuts have hurt DEP. The EPA is a much larger organization with more resources, but they also have more sites to oversee and are dealing with budget cuts as

New conservation director focuses on town's future

By STEPHEN BJORK

WILMINGTON - Carole Hamilton's extensive volunteer service to Wilmington over the years has enabled her to hit the ground running in her new position as the town's Director of Planning & Conservation.

"Ms. Hamilton is no stranger to Wilmington, having lived, worked, and volunteered in the community for many years prior to her move to Salem in 1999," Town Manager Michael Cairns says.

Hamilton spent a total of 18 years on Wilmington's Planning Board, acting as chairperson for several years of that tenure. She was instrumental in the creation of Wilmington's Affordable Housing Task Force, the precursor to the town's current Affordable Housing Partnership.

Since beginning her job two weeks ago, Hamilton has focused on facilitating a smooth transition.

"At this point I am looking to feel comfortable with all of the ongoing projects as well as with all of the projects currently in the planning stages," Hamilton says.

Upon request of the Housing Partnership, Hamilton is outlining her perspective of where the Town of Wilmington should be heading in regard to affordable housing.

"Wilmington is in a very unique position," Hamilton says.

"Wilmington is very close to the state's requirement of 10 percent of affordable housing and has the opportunity to guide developers, as opposed to

New voting machines ready for primary

By STEPHEN BJORK

WILMINGTON - The AccuVote voting system will make its debut with local voters during the upcoming September 14th primary.

Wilmington is leaving behind three decades of lever pulling in favor of new state-of-the-art optical scanning voting machines, manufactured by Diebold Election Systems, in order to be in accordance with recently enacted federal standards.

The Help America Vote Act of 2002 de-certifies lever machines and requires all communities to upgrade their technology prior to the 2004 November election. The act was passed in an effort to alleviate the confusion that marred Florida's 2000 presidential election.

The technology is mandated by a federal law enacted in the wake of the 2000 presidential election, in which the results out of Florida hung in the balance for 36 days.

Skate Park on track

By STEPHEN BJORK

WILMINGTON - Skaters will likely be riding and grinding at the Justin O'Neil Skate Park this fall.

According to Department of Public Works Superintendent Donald Onusseit, the concrete surface has been poured and formed. Town employees are still working on the expansion joints and the surface will be smoothed out with a grinder later this week.

"We looked into surfacing materials, but none of them appeared to offer substantial benefit," Onusseit said.

The Marturano Recreation Company is expected to install the fixtures starting September 14th.

The skate park will consist of two grind rails, a half pipe, speed bumps, a radius wedge with a kicker quarter pipe, two 8-foot wide quarter pipes, a

The Stoneham Theater

Feed your ears with Big Fat Vocal Feast

STONEHAM - The 3rd Annual Big Fat Vocal Feast will be held at the Stoneham Theater this coming Sunday, August 29, at 7 p.m.

What is the Big Fat Vocal Feast?

It's a feast for your ears. The Big Fat Vocal Feast will be showcasing a cappella and voice acts from all over the country. The audience will experience the full range of a cappella fare, from the rockin', and rollin', to pop and jazz to the classic barbershop quartet, with a little electronica thrown into the mix. Up and coming talent will share the stage with some of the a cappella community's best-known acts.

"This ain't your granddaddy's a cappella," says Wilmington resident Taunia Soderquist, of the band All About Buford, who will be hosting the show.

Experience the power of the human voice while you belt out your favorite tunes, hear some new ones, bust a move or two, and partake in a hoppin' ol' time.

TAX BREAK ON INHERITED IRA

There is one big downside to having a lot of asset "eggs" in a tax-deferred basket: if you die holding these assets, they may be subject to heavy taxation. If the amount in IRAs, 401(k) accounts, proceeds due on installment sales, royalty rights, even untaxed interest in certain savings bonds—all kinds of income-producing items—is considerable, it can be subject to estate tax liabilities and then income tax as well.

There is a way out. Although the full value of the deferred-tax assets are hit with the estate tax, the beneficiaries can get a break on the IRA (and other account) distributions, called income in respect of a decedent (IRD). There is a special itemized deduction for the portion of the estate tax bill that can be attributed to the IRAs, and this write-off is not subject to the 2-percent-of-AGI floor. It's advisable that one's tax advisor work with the professional who prepared the estate tax return.

We know the IRD rules and other tax savers. When you need tax know-how, you need the tax professionals at:

From the Left, the Right, You Can Write

Remember the good old days when bumper stickers merely boasted the names of the driver's presidential candidate of choice?

Now you can't pull out of your driveway without a car passing by that's plastered with bumper stickers that scream such acerbic slogans as "Kerry/Fonda 2004" or feature the letter "W" with a slash through it and the wisecrack war cry, "Let's not elect him in 2004, either."

The 2004 battle for the White House turned nasty a long time ago -- say, around the time the Supreme Court put those 537 Sunshine State votes between Governor George W. Bush and Vice President Al Gore. There was a truce, thankfully, in the dark days and weeks that followed September 11, but, regrettably, those white flags faded faster than some of the Old Glories we still see flapping from overpasses on the interstate.

So all right, all you liberals and conservatives. Here's the deal.

With a little more than two months to go before the presidential election, we at the Town Crier are looking for readers on both the left and right ends of the political spectrum who would like to write dueling columns to be published in editions between now and the big day on November 2.

We know you're out there. In the past four years, lots of you have revealed your ideological identities in letters to the editor about the electoral rollercoaster in Florida in 2000, gay marriage, the ongoing War on Terror and more.

Moderates and Independents need not apply. You're welcome to sit right where you are, in the center, so that both columnists we choose can grab a hold of each of your arms and yank you in their direction. After all, as poll after poll suggests, there are a lot of made minds already out there, and you're the one who is said to hold the key for President Bush to stay in the White House or for Senator Kerry to boot him from it.

Passion is a requirement, of course, though we're admittedly looking for somebody who brings more to the table than an expert ability to hit his or her target when throwing the remote control at the maddening political spin doctors on TV. We're hoping that you can write persuasively, entertainingly and succinctly about a few hot button issues on voters' minds. Think you can do it? We do too.

Show us your true colors, be they red or blue. Drop us an email at shawn@yourtowncrier.com or give us a call at 978-658-2346 by Friday, September 3.

Letters to the Editor

Elected officials played key role in securing hospital land

Dear Editor:
On behalf of the residents of Tewksbury, the Tewksbury Land Use Committee would like to thank Senator Sue Tucker, Representative Jim Miceli and Representative Barry Feingold for their help in protecting the land at Tewksbury Hospital. Without their support and hard work, the 400-plus acres of land at Tewksbury Hospital would not be protected by Article 97.

Senator Sue Tucker heard the residents of Tewksbury and their desire to protect the land from development. She and her staff responded by being instrumental in protecting the land. They spent countless hours working with the Land Use Committee and various government agencies to assist the town in realizing its dream.

Representative Jim Miceli and Representative Barry Feingold were also key players in the protection of the land. They supported the town and worked with the legislative process to ensure the passage of Article 97.

While various government agencies wanted to defeat the protection of the land, our elected officials pushed forward and were able to secure the land.

We are extremely thankful for the support and effort put forth by our state legislators. We truly believe that without their help, the land at Tewksbury Hospital would still be vulnerable to development.

This is a great example of how when people work together as a team, we can get the job done.

Tewksbury Land Use Committee

Thanks, WFD and WPD

Dear Editor:
We would like to give a special thank you to the Wilmington Fire Chief, his firefighters, and the Police Department for their quick response to the fire at our residence on August 2nd. We appreciate their professionalism and thank them for securing the safety of our home.

Thank you very much!

Wilmington and The Great Depression

... as remembered by John F. Maguire

Chapter 7 Recreation & Entertainment

Parents did not cater to children during that earlier period of our lives and kids were left to their own devices to amuse themselves. Most of the children came from family-oriented backgrounds and had to provide for themselves by their own means and imaginations. There was little trouble for anyone to get into. Children played games and sports and listened to radio programs and went to bed early nights. The only organization available was the Boy Scouts. There were no organized sports, except in high school. So most of them played their games and thrived.

Just about the time we moved to Wilmington, bubble gum cards were introduced. These were purchased at candy counters and for a few pennies you got a 2 1/2" x 3 1/2" piece of bubble gum with an accompanying card. Originally the cards featured Indian Chiefs such as Geronimo, Cochise and Sitting Bull; however, these were soon replaced by baseball players, such as Jimmy Foxx, Joe Cronin, Lefty Grove and others and thus the name "Baseball Cards" evolved. Even today, this is a thriving business. Back then we played games with the cards, scaling them to a wall where the nearest card would win. I collected a huge stack of them playing this game.

That first winter in Wilmington, I became enamored with skating and ice hockey. It started one cold Sunday afternoon, when, Arthur's brother, Fred, took the two of us up to the Back Bog, a cranberry bog up off of Shawsheen Avenue. Fred had a pair of skates and we didn't, but somehow, we were able to get some tin cans, crush them and fasten them to our feet. We had a great time that afternoon. Shortly afterwards, I got hockey skates and I came to love hockey almost as much as I loved baseball. After that, I spent many an afternoon and night skating on the Church Street cranberry bog, which has now been transformed into a park, and faces the Police Station and Safety Building. During those crisp, cold Sunday afternoons back in the thirties, that bog, which was flooded for skating every year, was teeming with skaters. It seemed as if everybody in town had a pair of skates. It was so crowded, there wasn't room to play hockey.

My account of this town would be sadly remiss if I failed to mention the most popular haven for entertainment during those lean years; the Wilmington Theatre. This was the place where so many folks went to lose themselves in the make-believe world of the movies... to forget their problems and troubles for a few hours. It was the biggest bargain in town. For a thin dime, you could view a full-length cowboy movie, a feature movie, a cartoon, a serial, current news and coming attractions. I spent many a Saturday afternoon lost in the fantasy of the movies. The program would change every week and on the weekends there was a full house. Featured actors of the day were James Cagney, Pat O'Brien, Clark Gable, Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers. Also popular were cowboys Ken Maynard, Tom Mix and Bob Steele. Other stars were Joan Crawford, Bing Crosby, Dorothy Lamour and many more.

There was one humorous incident that comes to mind concerning my brother Tommy that happened one Saturday afternoon. He had gone to the movies with other friends and the feature was "King Kong," starring Fay Wray and Robert Armstrong. At one point in the movie, there was a close-up of King Kong coming ever closer on the screen. Tommy, apparently scared out of his wits, left his seat in the theatre, ran all the way home, climbed the stairs to his bedroom and crawled under the bed.

The Wilmington Theatre building is still standing but the theatre closed many years ago. Since then it has housed other businesses and currently is the home for Cooke's Skate Supply, Inc. I'm sure there are still a few people around who remember this grand old theatre and how important it was to many people during those tentative times.

There were other places where people might gather for enjoyment on occasion. Thompson's Grove, Silver Lake, and what I believe may have been The Grange Hall on Wildwood Street. That hall burned down many years ago. That about sums up the case for what people did for amusement back during those years.

John F. Maguire, a retired attorney who currently resides in Wayland, lived in Wilmington for five years during the Great Depression of the 1930s. Next week, tune in to Chapter 8 of this series, which will be called "Art Fish - The Ramsays."

Standing Eight Count

by Stephen Bjork

Have you been to a kids' party lately? What has happened to the good old party games we had as a kid? They've all been replaced with piñatas.

No more musical chairs. That's too bad. Remember that warm feeling of abject isolation you felt when the music stopped and there was no chair for you? That was character building.

Okay, sure, Pin-the-Tail-on-the-Donkey may have been a tad bit dangerous. Let's face it; it's generally not a good policy to let a blindfolded 5-year old with hypertension run amok with a sharp tack.

"Uh-oh, Timmy just pinned the tail on Grandma."

So then, what sense does it make to replace that scenario with a 5-year-old child with Attention Deficit Disorder and a baseball bat smashing the bejeesus out of a cardboard donkey?

When exactly did piñatas begin monopolizing these parties, anyway? I never saw one when I was a kid and I went to my fair share of parties. It must have something to do with NAFTA.

Just what sort of lesson does a piñata teach children? Let's break it down. The initial goal is to smash the piñata with a blunt object until it completely breaks apart.

"Children, today we are going to learn the proper way to cause malicious destruction of property. Who wants to go first?"

And we wonder why teenagers go around smashing mailboxes? We encouraged it. And now these confused teenagers are going to keep smashing our mailboxes until they find one with some damn candy in it.

Once the piñata has been broken and all of the candy comes pouring out, the children are encouraged to barge through the crowd, pushing and shoving, and grab as much of the goodies as possible. Just a bunch of miniature looters going to work.

Meanwhile, you've got 600 moms and dads cheering the whole thing on.

"C'mon Jimmy! Bash that thing to smithereens! Go for the head! Smash it in the head!"

That, at any rate, is how a piñata is supposed to work, but it never goes quite that well.

My niece has a birthday party coming up next week and she has a piñata every year. My brother-in-law, Ed, doesn't have a good tree to hang the piñata from, so he ties it to the end of a 6-foot pole and holds it out over the kids.

The birthday girl gets the first turn, of course. Kids are huddled all around behind her and with her first backswing she takes out 20 kids -- the bulk of the competition.

The kids always start out wearing a blindfold. They're spun around three times and sent off in the vague direction of the worried piñata. The blindfold goes out the window once Ed has taken it in the crotch three or four times.

Each kid gets a turn, but they've got this stupid little plastic broom stick and the piñata is made out of titanium so they don't even make a dent in it. After three turns, little stragglers begin wandering off aimlessly looking for Hoodies.

As soon as each of the kids has suffered a concussion or torn a rotator cuff, the game comes to an end.

Out comes the cake and ice cream to replenish the kids' sugar levels.

Ed is supposed to be videotaping his daughter blowing out the candles, but he is busy out in the driveway running over the piñata with his car. He spent $20 on that damn piñata and, by God, he is going to get the thing open.

Meanwhile, the birthday girl has covered the cake with saliva while blowing out the candles and everyone wants a frosting flower. Mom is doing long division in her head to figure out how to evenly divide three flowers between 300 screaming kids. She'd like some help, but Ed has taken the piñata down to the basement. She can hear the table saw.

Now it's present time.

Kids go for the biggest present first. The problem, however, is that an envelope is taped to it. Why do grown-ups buy cards for little kids? For a kid too young to read, a birthday card is like a disciplinary time-out. It's an immovable object standing between the kid and unmitigated bliss. Mom steps in to read the card, essentially bringing the whole merry process to a halt. Ed could read the card, but the sounds of a chain saw and of various profanities are now emanating from the basement.

The card is always far longer than it needs to be. Y'know what the card should say? "Here's a big present. Quick, open it."

The party tends to wind down after the presents are opened. The kids are wandering around twitching and grinding their teeth from sugar overload and the parents begin getting ready to leave when they spy Ed standing on the roof of his two story house holding the piñata and laughing maniacally.

He hurls the piñata, which lands with a thud on the cement patio and bursts open splattering candy all over the yard.

The kids are completely unfazed and nonchalantly begin picking up the candy while the Fire Department shows up with the ladder truck to help Ed down from his roof.

Every year we thank the firefighters and offer them cake and ice cream. Every year they smile and politely decline while slipping Ed into a "special" jacket. Ed just keeps muttering, "Pinata, dead, Pinata, dead," as they close the ambulance door and take him away.

He'll be back in a week or two. He always is.

Letter to the Editor
Sign petition to oppose NE Trainsrail's exemption approval

Dear Editor:

I would like to take an opportunity to advise the community on recent developments concerning the Olin Chemical Property and its proposed redevelopment.

Last year during a well organized campaign, the citizens of Wilmington and Woburn joined forces with our Federal and State Representatives and Senators, along with Woburn and Wilmington officials and department heads, in expressing our opposition to a train-truck transfer station proposed for the Olin Chemical Property. It's a property and site which has closed five of our nine wells and a site which is undergoing intensive scrutiny and environmental evaluation. This site has been referred to by the Department of Environmental Protection of Massachusetts as one of the states most complex and contaminated areas. We know all too well its environmental and negative impact on the community of Wilmington and this regional effort to stop any development of this property until full analysis is completed is justifiable.

The Federal Section of Environmental Analysis recommendation is to conditionally approve a project proposal by a New Jersey based company (New England Transrail, LLC) to develop a rail re-load center on the Olin property. It based much of its decision on Olin reports to the year 2000 with only scant references to NDMA and gave no credence to the present investigations by EPA, the Wilmington Childhood Cancer study, or the shut down of our wellfield as a result of this site. A foot print project proposal in 1999/2000 for a bottling distribution center, paved the way for this project and it is that footprint which is supported for this development. No consideration has been given to the present circumstances or the ongoing processes by the State and Federal government.

The environmental activists in this community, who stood up to oppose this earlier bottling distribution project, and who have been publicly admonished for doing so, had tremendous insight for they somehow knew instinctively or with a supreme intuition that this property was more of a hazard than what was being presented to this town by its owners. Even though the activists can be flattered and honored by the assertion that they stopped that project, their opposition much like the most recent efforts fell on deaf ears. The fact of the matter is those responsible for the projects demise were the employees, the company and its hired environmental attorney who was able to unveil certain environmental and negative impacts of the site which posed potential threats to the health and welfare of those working in or around the facility. Bravo for those few stalwart residents who stood up and were vocal. The Concerned Citizens Network in collaboration with the Wilmington Woburn Collaborative feel that nothing should be developed on the site prior to its completed analysis and remediation. Nothing!!

To support this viewpoint, the Public Involvement Participation group, formed and allowed for under the MGL21E for the Olin site two years ago, was informed late last week that the DEP will be seeking a National Priority Listing for this site with the Federal Environmental Protection Agency. One of the reasons cited by the DEP was that the present property owners are unwilling to adhere to a timely comprehensive cleanup of the site. Last summer the DEP asked the EPA to conduct extensive testing on the water in the tainted aquifer with state of the art methods of high resolution mass spectrometry. A preliminary report was issued this spring. In that report, it stated that over 100 chemicals and compounds were still unidentified. Over 60 chemicals and compounds have been identified as chemicals of concern. The DEP has informed this group that the EPA laboratory and scientists in Nevada are overwhelmed at this sites complexity.

The proposed project now, is environmentally offensive for this site. It will bring further waste and material at first in closed containers to the site for transfer from train to over 400 truckloads a day to and from this site. This material can exacerbate the present site conditions if an accident should occur. The future proposal is one that includes storing additional solid waste materials in open containers and in newly constructed buildings. The present list of commodities is as follows: lumbar, newsprint, non-hazardous waste, paper products, plastics, propane, recycled paper and plastics, sand, gravel, scrap steel, stone, wood products, construction debris, contaminated soils, liquid chemicals, brick, cement, coal, and any other products which could be transported in intermodal containers. Totalling 665,000 tons of waste per year.

I implore everyone in the community to sign a composed petitioned letter to oppose the approval of exemption to New England Transrail to begin development of rail lines on the site for this project. Please contact me at 978 658-4725 as soon possible as the deadline for the comment period is September 3, 2004.

DEPENDING ON YOU

When gauging their need for life insurance, many parents incorrectly assume that their children's dependency ends upon graduation from high school. The fact is, however, that most college students still rely on their parents for tuition, daily expenses, and other needs. In the event that a parent cannot be there to meet those needs, he or she might want to plan on having a life insurance policy in place that will be there. Even then, once children do become financially independent, parents may find that others will rely on them for support. For example, aging parents may look to their adult children for care and financial assistance. These are factors to take into consideration when purchasing life insurance.

When you consider purchasing life insurance, keep in mind that what works for one family, may not work for another family. In some instances, more than one strategy will be necessary. We believe that every customer deserves prompt claims payments, thoroughly researched coverage choices, the highest quality products, competitive pricing, and personalized, caring service. Giving you the best protection possible is our business. You'll Like the Way We do Business.™

NOTE: Life insurance is also a valuable resource for helping heirs meet tax obligations of an estate.

This charcoal drawing, made by J.F. Gilman in 1871, shows the Jensen Farm from a point looking south on Andover Street. From the upper window of the barn, in this picture, a young lady, name unknown, used to sit and count cattle being led into the slaughter house. She was employed as a book keeper by William E. Gowing. The nearest building at right, at right angles to the street, is said to have been the old North School, which stood in the triangle between Woburn and Andover Streets, years before this drawing was made. It is now a part of the Jensen farmhouse.

North Wilmington once the home of thriving meat business

EDITOR'S NOTE. The following article was written in the 1930's by Paul D. Emmons, a lawyer, historian and writer who lived at the corner of Middlesex Avenue and Salem Street, opposite the Cadwallader Ford house, where Aunt Lizzie Blanchard lived. Emmons and his sister died in a 1959 fire which destroyed the house and his considerable collection of Wilmington history.

Aunt Lizzie Blanchard and Walter Ford Blanchard were grandchildren of Cadwallader Ford, Jr., Captain of a company of Minute Men and later a messenger in the Revolutionary War. Walter's daughter Charlotte married William E. Gowing.

The Hamlens (also spelled Hamlin) lived in the house on Andover Street that is now owned by the Krey family. A portion of the house was cut off and moved, and is now the Webster home.

William E. Gowing lived in the house now owned by Arthur Jensen. The slaughter barn, across the street, was burned by an arsonist in 1967. Bert Buck (Herbert N. Buck) founded Buck Bros. grocery store in North Wilmington. His son Rodney ran the store for many years, then sold it to John Elia, Jr. in 1956.

WILMINGTON
Picturesque Wilmington!

Interesting memories. Curious coincidences of fate and circumstance which tie up to the past and effect our present lives.

In the summer of 1887 we boarded at the Hamlen's. Romance was in the air. Bert Buck was courting Emma Hamlen, and in the fall, he married her. Another romance was also in the making, culminating on the celebrated croquet grounds of Aunt Lizzie Blanchard, the marriage of Annie Gowing and her cousin, Fred Gowing. Annie Gowing's father was William E. Gowing, brother of the ill-fated George Gowing, who had built the Hamlen House. William E. Gowing lived next door to his brother George and carried on a thriving meat business there.

Herds of cattle from Brighton were driven over the road, corralled in his cow yard, slaughtered and dressed in the old slaughter barn which is still standing on the opposite side of the road. The meat was then packed in large two-horse teams, like the covered wagons of western pioneer days, and driven over the road to Lawrence where it was sold.

William E. Gowing did a large wholesale business, for those days, having 75 to 100 head in his yard all the time. The steers were driven through a runway to the edge of the barn floor, shot through the head with a rifle, skinned, hauled up by an overhead windlass, and suspended by their hind legs while the carcass was quartered and trimmed. The meat was then put in refrigerators on ice supplied by a man named Holt from Andover, who cut it from the meadow where George Gowing and his wife were drowned. (Brown's Crossing - ed.)

Holt had an ice house at the edge of that meadow, which the old timers will still remember, although it has since been torn down. Frank L. Eames bought it from him in 1877 and started the first retail ice business in Wilmington.

Butchering was a widespread industry in town, several members of the Buck, Eames and Carter families being engaged in it, but one of the most picturesque figures was Horace Sheldon, son of the celebrated Asa G. Sheldon. He was a drover, the only one in Wilmington in the early days. Every Tuesday, he went to Brighton, and came back with a herd of cattle, cutting out and delivering a dozen or more at a time to his different customers along the way. By nightfall, he would reach Ruel Carter's place in Woburn, where he would herd in for the night, then finish his trip to Wilmington the next day.

Aldice Eames remembers how as a small boy attending the East School, he used to climb the stone wall to get out of the way of the long-horned steers coming up the road, and George Buck can tell you how Horace Sheldon's ox team used to make daily trips with the manure and offal from William E. Gowing's slaughter barn, carrying it down Sheldon's farm on Woburn Street (just beyond Wildwood Street - ed.) to spread it on the land for fertilizer.

A quarter of beef sold in the wholesale trade at somewhere from 7 to 9 1/2 cents a pound. About 1870, William E. Gowing, finding that he could buy cheaper in Chicago than in Brighton, moved to Lawrence and went into partnership with a man named Higgins, whose wife was related to the Swift family. Gowing became an agent for Swift's, and lived in Lawrence for several years, but his love for Wilmington and his connection with the Blanchard family (his wife was a niece of Aunt Lizzie's) drew him back.

Coincidentally, my family had picked the Hamlen place for their summer vacation in 1887 because it was a good one for kids, I being a two-legged three-year old at the time. Today it is Pinemere Farm, given over to raising four-legged kids. And William E. Gowing, who used to live next door to it, built the house I am living in now.

Unenrolled voters can take part in September 14 primary

The Massachusetts State Primary will be held on Tuesday, September 14, 2004, from 7 a.m. to 8 p.m.

Tewksbury Town - Clerk Elizabeth Carey has mentioned that many inquiries have been directed to the Town Clerk's office regarding whether an unenrolled registered voter can vote in the September State Primary. The answer is yes.

Voters should be aware of the following important information before voting in a Primary:

1. There are four official party primaries in Massachusetts this September: Democratic, Republican, Libertarian, and Green - Rainbow.

If a voter is designated on the voting list as being a member of one of these parties, they may only vote on that party ballot.

2. Voters who are registered as unenrolled (voters not enrolled in a party) may declare at the September Primary whether they want a Democratic ballot, a Republican ballot, a Libertarian ballot or a Green - Rainbow party ballot. They must choose a party ballot on that day of the Primary in order to vote. There is no Independent ballot.

3. Chapter 475, Acts of 1998, (MGL:CH.53:37) provides for the State Primary, if you are registered as an unenrolled voter prior to the selection of a Party ballot at the State Primary, you shall continue to be an unenrolled voter. After voting there is no need for you to fill-out a Change of Party Enrollment Card, this will be done automatically for you at the Town Clerk's office.

The orientation will take place between 9 a.m. and 1 p.m. on Tuesday, August 31, in the auditorium of the high school. This year's theme will be a Tropical Adventure. Limited transportation will be provided for those who need it. There has been a temporary bus schedule put into place just for orientation. This will not be the same schedule for the school year.

The Orientation Committee has worked hard over the summer to plan various activities. Some of these activities include: a raffle, locker assignments, the School Activities Fair, school tours, and more. Students will also get to meet the faculty and see where their classes are located.

Each student contributes $10 yearly to the class activity fund. Freshmen class dues will be collected during this orientation.

Kathleen Scanlon is pleased with the new equipment, which she expects to significantly speed up the process for voters and her staff.

"These machines will help tremendously at the end of the night in providing vote counts," Scanlon said. "We don't expect to be doing very much hand-counting."

Each of Wilmington's three voting locations have historically held five voting machines with each machine, providing separate totals at the end of the night, leaving poll workers with the responsibility of adding up the totals from 15 different machines.

Beginning on September 14, each polling location will have a single AccuVote machine, which will provide a computer print-out of totals upon the closing of the polls, and election workers will have only three totals to add together.

Wilmington voters, instead of waiting for one of five booths to become vacant, will now have the opportunity to fill out a paper ballot at one of 16 voting stations and then simply drop it into a single AccuVote machine before leaving the polls.

Each precinct will also have a voting station accessible to people with disabilities.

Voting stations provide ample privacy, but a "privacy sleeve" is available upon request. The voter slips his/her ballot into the sleeve while still at the voting station and the AccuVote then extracts the ballot directly from the sleeve.

The paper ballots have a clearly outlined layout and are easy to understand, with concise instructions on how many votes to cast for each race. Additionally, they provide voters with the opportunity to review their decisions, on paper, before casting the ballot. Paper ballots also provide a concrete and permanent record of voter choices, enhancing the town's ability to perform a recount if necessary.

To choose a candidate or answer a question, voters simply shade in the appropriate oval in a fashion similar to lottery tickets or standardized test sheets in school. Detailed instructions will be posted in each voting station. Markers will be available to voters, but the AccuVote is able to read a variety of different types of ink and even Number 2 pencils. The AccuVote is not, however, capable of reading red ink.

Absentee voters will have the opportunity to use the very same ballot as voters showing up at the polls. Historically, absentee ballots were counted by hand by election workers. The new system allows for the absentee ballots to be dropped into the machine along with all of the others.

The AccuVote also offers protection for ballots filled out incorrectly. Should a voter make a mistake on a ballot, it is rejected and a clear message indicating the basis of the error is displayed. The voter then has the opportunity to correct the mistake, an opportunity that had not previously been available. The old lever machines were not capable of identifying voter mistakes.

According to Scanlon, Wilmington is the second to last community in the state to adopt optical scanning technology.

"All the other communities can't say enough about these machines," Scanlon said. "Most people are ready for this technology."

While voters require no familiarity with computers to successfully cast a vote, Scanlon encourages everyone to participate in the September primary, not only to cast a primary vote, but also in order to become accustomed to the new process prior to the November presidential election.

Additionally, voters may orient themselves to the new machines by paying a visit to the Town Clerk's office at Town Hall on Glen Road, anytime during regular business hours. While there, they may fill out a sample ballot and cast a mock ballot.

Additional information can be obtained on the town's official website at www.town.wilmington.ma.us. From the main page, click on the link to "Administration" and then the link to "Town Clerk."

New conservation director focuses on town's future

accepting whatever the developer wants to do."

Hamilton is pleased to see the concepts of mixed-use zoning and Neighborhood Activity Centers being explored in Wilmington. Mixed-use zoning allows for retail and commercial structures to include a residential component, while Neighborhood Activity Centers would be small-scale and resident-friendly focal points for retail and commercial activity scattered around town.

According to Wilmington's Master Plan, in regard to Neighborhood Activity Centers, "Design guidelines will ensure that developments enhance town character, promote pedestrian access, provide opportunities for social interaction, and enable further economic development."

Hamilton has also been working closely with Robert Douglas, Wilmington's Assistant Director of Planning & Conservation, to get up to speed on the town's conservation issues and projects. She describes Douglas as knowledgeable in conservation matters and an invaluable asset to the department.

Wilmington's former and current Directors of Planning & Conservation share a rather interesting history.

Lynn Duncan served as Wilmington's Director of Planning & Conservation for the past 13 years. Wilmington's first exposure to Duncan was when the town first engaged the services of the municipal planning consulting firm of Community Opportunities Group (COG) to assist with the town's first housing plan. Hamilton was part of the hiring team that interviewed and subsequently chose to use COG. Duncan, a principal with that consulting firm, provided Wilmington with technical assistance and worked closely with Hamilton.

Duncan later saw a job listing advertising Wilmington's desire to hire a new Director of Planning. Duncan's first phone call went to Hamilton to inquire whether she thought the town would consider an application from her for the position. Hamilton encouraged Duncan to apply.

"She certainly didn't need any help from me," Hamilton says. "She was more than qualified for the position."

Several years later, Hamilton happened to see a job listing in the newspaper for a position with COG, and Duncan happily offered to provide a reference.

Hamilton began working for COG in 1994 and continued until accepting this position with Wilmington. While at COG, she worked closely with four communities in Massachusetts and Connecticut, writing and administering Community Development Block Grants, but the majority of her time was spent in municipal planning.

Recently, when Duncan was seeking the position of City Planner/Community Development Director for Salem, Massachusetts, the city in which Hamilton coincidently resides, Hamilton once again provided a reference.

Hamilton comes into her new position with a Bachelor's Degree in English from Keuka College in Keuka Park, New York. She has completed her course work for a Master's Degree in urban and environmental policy at Tufts University in Medford.

Hamilton and her late husband Robert, the long-time and respected head of the Wilmington High School English Department, raised two children in Wilmington.

"I am confident that Ms. Hamilton's background and experience, particularly her many years of service to the Wilmington community, uniquely qualify her for this important position," Town Manager Cairns says. "I look forward to working with Carole to meet the many challenges associated with the Town's housing, planning, environmental, and economic development responsibilities."

Olin cleanup may become federal priority

Kathleen Barry, the President of Concerned Citizens Network (CCN), a local group of activists, is in favor of the transfer of authority, especially since the EPA's Nevada laboratory has been conducting tests with its cutting edge technology on samples from the Olin site.

"I feel that the Superfund status and EPA oversight is the only thing that makes sense," Barry said. "I feel the bar would be set higher with both cleanup requirements and testing."

With DEP carrying the ball, it could be expected that the Olin site will be on the fast-track for NPL listing. Even so, the process could take more than a year. It is the time during the transition that concerns Barry the most.

"During this interim phase we are most vulnerable," Barry said. "Perhaps there might be some kind of injunction put in place until the EPA makes its final decision."

Sue Sinclair, the CEO of Townspeople Organized Against Illness and Contamination (TOXIC), welcomes the EPA, but shares Barry's concerns.

"DEP has set time frames for certain work to be done," Sinclair said. "What happens to those time frames during this process?"

According to Sinclair, it is rare for DEP to initiate such a transfer of authority, especially considering recent cuts to its budget. DEP fines aggressively for non-compliance and uses the collected funds towards its operating budget.

TOXIC is the group overseeing the EPA's Sutton Brook Disposal Superfund site made up of approximately 100 acres in Wilmington and Tewksbury, covering the areas commonly referred to as the McDonald Road site and Rocco's Landfill.

"My experience with EPA has been magnificent," Sinclair said. "We've had to keep their feet to the fire, but they've been great."

According to Barry, the situation is simply more than a state agency is capable of controlling. A federal agency would have far more authority and resources to work in an adversarial environment.

"It is appearing that Olin is using legal measures to obstruct the wishes of everyone here, and it is evident that the 'big guns' of the EPA refer to the litigation and federal adherence laws which the state doesn't have," Barry said. "DEP is sending us a message that it is far worse than expected and newer investigations are being met with huge opposition from Olin."

Olin is no stranger to the EPA. A simple Google search on the Internet for the terms "Olin" and "superfund" leads to 77 pages of results. Many of the sites undoubtedly appear more than once in the search, but it indicates an Olin presence in Superfund sites in the areas of Cheshire, CT, Saltville, VA, Moudsville, WV, Beaumont, TX, and Mobile, AL, just to name a few.

The Olin property in Wilmington consists of 53 acres, but the estimated limits of contaminant migration appear to nearly double that area, extending as far as Chestnut Street. A small portion of the site overlaps the Maple Meadow Landfill and a small one also runs into Woburn by the Municipal Landfill.

In 1953 a chemical manufacturing facility was constructed at Olin's current location on Eames Street and was subsequently owned and operated by at least three different companies prior to Olin's purchase of the property in 1980.

The facility primarily manufactured chemical blowing agents, stabilizers, antioxidants and other specialty chemicals for the rubber and plastics industry and generated liquid waste which was disposed of on site.

Wastewater was not the only form of contamination introduced to the site. Drums containing organic chemicals were buried on the property and there are reports of spills of leaks of various chemicals.

Massachusetts General Law 21E was enacted in 1983, and the Olin property was first listed as a Location to Be Investigated by the DEP in 1987. Olin applied for a Waiver of Approvals, which was granted by the DEP in 1989 and classified the property as a Non-Priority Site. It was believed at that time that any contaminants were contained to the property and had no impact on the town water supply.

transport," Hull said.

Comments from the town will be reviewed by an administrative group within STB, which will then offer a recommendation in response. Normally, according to Hull, the administrative group would offer their recommendation to a three-person STB committee, but two members of that committee have resigned and have not been replaced.

"Ultimately, this issue will be decided by a single individual," Hull said.

If the STB grants an exemption to NE Transrail, the town will appeal the decision. At that point, the matter will enter the court system, though Hull is not sure under what jurisdiction.

"If an exemption is granted, we may find that we'll have more success in the court system," Hull said.

Newhouse feels that it is unfortunate that the town is in this position.

"There was a prior proposed use for the property for a liquor distributor that was far more in line with what the town would like to see there," Newhouse said. "There was a concerted effort on the part of some to keep the land from being developed before it was completely cleaned up and that is simply not feasible."

Hull expects the town to make efforts to join forces with groups in Woburn that are also contesting the project, but the current focus for Wilmington is on drafting the most effective comments in regard to SEA's assessment.

The town has until September 3 to submit comments.

The proposed reload facility would transload various materials, including construction debris, contaminated soils, liquid chemicals, newsprint, non-hazardous waste, and other products, from trucks to rail road cars. The Environmental Assessment notes that none of the materials would be hazardous or explosive and that none would be processed, stored, or handled at the reload facility.

Roughly 400 truck trips per day may be generated by the facility, depending on the success of the business, and one train with roughly 25 cars will run per day on a six-day-per-week schedule.

Skate Park on track

manual box, a raked quarter pipe, and a fun box with a planter. All equipment is manufactured by GameTime, a leader in the industry, and will provide a challenging environment for novices and experts alike.

Ample space has been left to allow for expansion and the introduction of future technology, according to Wilmington's GIS Coordinator, Sue Carlson.

Onusseit anticipates that work will be completed by the end of September. He's hopeful that it may even be sooner.

Wilmington has had plans for a skate park for several years and, after analyzing various town-owned properties, identified the Shawsheen School as the most suitable site. Information and expertise were sought from a number of experts in the field and skate parks of surrounding communities were examined during the planning stages.

"This has been an interesting project for us," Onusseit said. "We've looked at quite a few in the area and learned from their mistakes."

The skate park is being built adjacent to the existing roller hockey area, which itself is adjacent to the tennis courts and basketball court at the school. Discussion is ongoing whether or not to completely surround the skate park with a fence.

"We definitely want to separate it from the soccer fields, but we may not need to fence all the way around," Onusseit said.

The park is named after Justin O'Neil, the local teenager who died unexpectedly from a brain aneurysm in January. Friends, family and residents raised nearly $50,000 for the skate park in a single day as a result of a road race and other events that took place on Wilmington's Justin O'Neil Day on June 13th.

Susan MacDonald, the children's librarian at the Wilmington Memorial Library, hammers a cinder block resting on the belly of Nicole Levasseur, of the Museum of Science, who incidentally, rested on a bed of nails. Levasseur presented a magic show at the library last week.

Mike Hackett and Joe Castiglione hanging out in the broadcast booth at Fenway Park. Hackett's got the internship of a lifetime, working for WEEI at the Red Sox games.

His dream field

Hackett hangs out at Fenway Park

By: MIKE IPPOLITO
Sports Correspondent

Every year, hundreds or perhaps even thousands of college students in Massachusetts participate in internships to help towards obtaining their degrees. No doubt most of these internships offer great opportunities for students to learn more about their chosen field of study. But it is difficult to imagine anyone having a more exciting opportunity than Wilmington's own Andy Hackett.

Hackett, entering his fourth year of a five year program at Northeastern, has spent the school year doing what many would consider to be a dream job, working as the statistician for Red Sox broadcasts on WEEI.

Hackett, who graduated from Wilmington High in 2001 after a brilliant sports career that included winning Cape Ann League MVP honors for the Wildcat baseball team in his senior season, knows how lucky he is to have such a great job.

"It's just been unbelievable," Hackett said. "Sometimes I will get numb to it and forget just how lucky I am and then all of a sudden it kicks in that I'm in the WEEI broadcast booth at Fenway Park. Sometimes I forget how lucky I am, but I shouldn't."

It was more than just luck, however, that landed Hackett this prime internship. The lucky part was taking a broadcasting class taught by Red Sox broadcaster and Northeastern professor Joe Castiglione. After that it was hard work and persistence by Hackett that earned him the job that is the envy of his classmates.

"Every year Joe picks someone to do this internship," Hackett said. "I approached him freshman year about it but he told me I was too young at the time. I kept in touch with him since then, e-mailing him every few months and finally this season, he told me I had the job."

Hackett's day at the ball park starts about 3 hours before game time. He sets up the computers for Castiglione and his broadcast partner Jerry Trupiano, goes to the clubhouse to get the team roster, chats a little with reporters, listens in on the manager's meeting with the media and brings the lineup cards up to Joe and Jerry.

"Before the game I get the basic stats together, check if anybody for either team is close to a milestone so the broadcasters know ahead of time and can anticipate it," Hackett said. "Once the game starts I keep track of pitch counts, watch the out of town scoreboard, check to see if anybody is near a season high for hits in a game or anything like that."

Probably the most exciting part of the job for Hackett is at the end of the game when a Player of the Game is selected. It's Hackett's job to get on to the field immediately after the game and get the player ready for his radio interview. This can be a little intimidating when the player is a Pedro Martinez or Manny Ramirez, but Hackett has adjusted very well, partially due to the graciousness of the players.

"I have only had Pedro one time and it was very intimidating. He is one of the greatest pitchers of all time, but he was very nice. He gave me all the time I needed," Hackett said. "Most of the guys on this team are very receptive.

I have had no problem."

When asked if he had a favorite player to deal with, Hackett could not single out just one. He was asked about Ramirez as well, and his response may come as a bit of a surprise to fans of the Sox slugger.

"Johnny Damon is a really nice guy, but it is hard to pick just one. They have all been great," Hackett said. "As for Manny, I haven't been there in years past when he wasn't talking to the media, but with us this year he has been very accommodating. He has been nothing but nice, and tells us he loves coming on."

Hackett is majoring in communications at Northeastern with a concentration in media studies. Broadcasting is the ultimate goal for Hackett, but he understands that it is very hard to attain a position in the broadcast booth. His degree will also allow him to pursue positions in public relations, media relations or marketing, and the contacts he has made while in his current position can do nothing but help in the pursuit of his goals.

Hackett knows that if he does go into broadcasting, he is learning from two of the best in Castiglione and Trupiano.

"Joe is unbelievable. He remembers everything without writing it down, and as a person he is just terrific. He does a lot of work with the Jimmy Fund and he takes the time to give someone like me an opportunity," Hackett said.

"And Jerry is great. He shows up five hours before the game to start preparing."

This has been a season and a summer that Hackett will never forget and the lifelong diehard Red Sox fan is looking forward to the rest of the season and beyond. He knows that there are plenty of students who would love to take his place next year, but he is equally as eager to continue in his position. He will return to the classroom full time next year, whereas this year he has been in the co-op program at Northeastern, but he does not plan on letting that stop him.

"I am hoping they invite me back," Hackett said. "It will be tougher next year because I would have to balance classes along with the job, but anything it takes to make it work out, I will do it."

Ahhh Fall

Ahhh! Football!!!

By: LOUIE CIMAGLIA

It's the most wonderful time of the year.

Yes, believe it or not, it's time to go back to school. And where there are notebooks and pencils, there are footballs and television.

Going back to school marks a prolific time in Wilmington - that is High School football. This year is really looking up for the Wildcats. After falling a yard short of a trip to the super bowl, this year's team is hungry. Junior quarterback Joe Herra is ready to step up and be the leader of this team. With Brennan Jones coming off a great year, Herra will have a big target to look for downfield. In the backfield, Rob Gillis must fill the shoes of departing Sean Godding and Dave Demango. However, Gillis will have some help from Junior Steve Downs. After an impressive year Downs will carry a bigger load this year for Wilmington. Also, Sean Murphy will be a big part of the Cats' offense after a strong performance late last year.

On the other side of the ball, Brian Giambenedino will be a big presence in the secondary. Downs and Gillis will patrol with the linebacker corps. And on D-Line there will be huge shoes to fill with the departure of Godding, Kenny Luongo, Bobby Harrington, and Charlie Lojek.

Of course, there is more than just High School football. Your defending Super Bowl champion New England Patriots will begin a little after students hit the books. With a tough schedule and an emotional tribute to Pat Tillman scheduled for week two in Arizona, it should make for a great year for the Pats. Every game will be tough. But we can't help but throw around the term dynasty. It's early, yes, but the Pats have won two of the last three super bowls... without a real running game. Now the champs have added Corey Dillon. Dillon can grind out the tough yards and break games open with his speed and versatility.

Replacing Ted Washington will be difficult, but Vince Wilfork has the talent and size to grow into a Washington-type run stuffer. Tom Brady has continued his hard work in the off-season and is developing into a great quarterback. He's always been a winner, now he has the weapons to be an MVP caliber player. He's always had a great play-action, now he has a formidable running game. The defense has more or less stayed the same with the exception of Washington. Last year's rookies like Ty Warren, Asante Samuel and Eugene Wilson will all play a bigger role in the defense. And most importantly, there is one thing that has not changed at all... the coaching staff. King Belichick still has Charlie Weiss and Romeo Crenell on his side, and after the super bowl it looked like at least one of them, if not both, would be gone.

And there is one more thing that makes students a little antsy in the classroom, and that of course is playoff baseball. The Red Sox are in a dogfight in the wildcard, but don't look now, as of Sunday, the Sox were only five and a half games out of first with six meetings left with the Evil Empire. With a hampered pitching staff, sputtering offense and owner about to erupt, the wheels are starting to wobble on the Yankees' car. And their bullpen's wearing down.

Mariano Rivera, Tom Gordon and Paul Quantrill are virtually the only pitchers the Yanks have, and they work every night. Come September they will have a hurting bullpen. The Sox are finally starting to click, with a rotation sturdy from top to bottom and a bullpen that is deep enough to make a run at the playoffs, it could be interesting.

It is back to school time, but it doesn't mean there is a lack of activity.

This could turn out to be a wild fall in Wilmington, but only time will tell.

And as soon as the bell rings, it could be the year we all remember as the year of athletic greatness.

Frank Bellino, a financial controller from Wilmington, met his son Anthony at an adoption party at the Flee! Center in 2003. While he was under the state's care, Anthony was but one of approximately 3,000 Massachusetts children currently finding themselves in such a situation and hoping to be adopted. (Maureen Lamoureux, photo)

Adoption Party

By SHAWN P. SULLIVAN

The Massachusetts Adoption Resource Exchange (MARE) knows that the process for parents seeking to adopt a child is an emotionally complicated one, filled with uncertainty, hope, scrutiny and waiting. That's why the organization throws occasional "adoption parties" to take the edge off the quest.

On Saturday, August 28, MARE, a private, nonprofit organization for 47 years, is hosting an adoption party at the Kids Playground at 15 Normac Road in Woburn from 9 a.m. to 11 a.m. The event, which will be attended by approximately 50 children seeking homes, is open to anyone who is interested in adoption, whether they're old pros, new to the process, single, partnered or married, homeowners or renters, you name it.

According to Nichole Lawton, a MARE communications specialist, the party is an opportunity for potential moms and dads to meet foster children and their social workers and learn more about adoption. The event takes place in a casual, relaxed setting, where a variety of refreshments and activities, such as minigolf and arts and crafts, are available.

"These parties are a chance to meet children and make a connection," Lawton says. "Lots of times the histories of these foster children seem horrendous, but when adults meet them at these parties they discover that they're regular kids. It's hard to know a child on paper because you have to meet them to know if you have a chemistry with them."

The parties are fun, Lawton says, because, prior to each event, social workers explain to the kids that the occasion is potentially one of the ways to meet parents. Kids are able to play games and, therefore, relax, which frees them from feeling as though they're on display to those who might or might not choose them. Adults, in turn, get in on the fun, in effect breaking the ice. "These adoption parties have worked very well," Lawton says. "They rank right up there as one of our effective ways to make matches."

Frank Bellino, a financial controller who lives in Wilmington, knows what Lawton means. He met his son, Anthony, at an adoption party at the Fleet Center in Boston in February of 2003. Come April of that year, Bellino had chosen Anthony, then 9 years old, and the two began the gradual process of finalizing an adoption.

"Anthony caught my eye," Bellino says. "There was just something about his look, his eyes. He had a tenderness and sensitivity."

ANTHONY MANCONI

In a wonderful musical play FINNIAN'S RAINBOW, a BEAUTIFUL SONG was sung. The tune started with, "How are things in Glencamorra?" Is that little brook still flowing there? Does it run through Donegal, Kilkenny and Kildare?"

Folks, many times a person RETURNS to the place where he or she was BORN AND RAISED, but they return to a feeling of disappointment.

It seems that some people hoped to find what was LEFT BEHIND many years ago - their YOUTH!

Bob Thaves, Author of Frank and Ernest said it more eloquently: "There is no U-TURN on the HIGHWAY OF LIFE..."

SUCCESS is RELATIVE - it seems the more success, the more relatives that crawl out of the woodwork!...

Blackie Vega told me that when he shook hands with CARDINAL LAW, his entire right side went SOBER...

Movie Reviews by Paul Feely

"EXORCIST: THE BEGINNING"

MOVIE: "EXORCIST: THE BEGINNING"
GRADE: NO STARS
WHATSOEVER

If you are a horror fan, come in Reading Chronicle offices and see me before having some coffee on any given day - the sight before your eyes will be more terrifying than any visual director Renny Harlin has put on the big screen in this mess of a movie.

Not only should this one be avoided at the movie theaters, but if you are a fan of 'The Exorcist' at all, you shouldn't even walk into a store that's selling it once it eventually hits the streets on DVD, which will probably within 10 days based on its opening weekend box office take ($18 million). The fact that his movie shares anything with that classic example of movie horror at its best is more blasphemous than anything that came out of Linda Blair's mouth.

SHORTTAKES
MOVIE: "ALIEN VS. PREDATOR" GRADE: **

Two Hollywood heavy-weight science fiction series collide head-on in this so-so sci-fi action movie.

This movie has little to do with the 'Alien' or 'Predator' movies that have come before them (in fact, the current plotline apparently disregards the other 'Alien' movies entirely, as it is set in present-day 2004 - therefore, the human race would know about the alien killing machines well before they encounter them, supposedly for the first time, in the far-off future of the first 'Alien' movie).

Imagine that the Earth has been used for centuries as a kind of paintball arena, with the Predators using the Aliens as prey in a winner-take-all battle that apparently takes place every 100 years, and you have the basic premise behind this one.

The acting is nothing special, and director Paul W. S. Anderson takes way too long setting up the very flimsy relationships between the human characters before getting to what everyone who plunked down their money is waiting to see - a brawl to end it all between these two killing machines. The movie picks up once the fighting starts, but there's not enough of these scenes to salvage it.

About the Towns

by Phyllis Nissen

A POCKETFUL OF MIRACLES

Wakefield: 'In good shape'

"Newly elected town treasurer John McCarthy, Jr., is settling into the office, held for close to 50 years by the late Paul Lazzaro, and is finding that everything seems to be in good shape," notes the Wakefield edition of the "Daily Times Chronicle."

"I can see us sending out a Request for Proposals (RFPs) for bank services," McCarthy said. I also want to take advantage of the most recent technological changes."

"However, these are described as normal changes when a new person comes into an office. Also a normal procedure will be the annual audit that the Town Treasury will go through."

"Town Administrator Thomas Butler said, 'We have an audit every year. It's required by law.'"

"However, because of the change, it will take a little longer."

"McCarthy, a former independent auditor, knows the procedures that go along with an audit and is not worried about what the independent firm conducting the procedure on his office will find. However, he is meeting with Butler and the auditors before the latter move into his office for the accounting of the town's bank balances."

"Butler said, 'They will balance all of the town's bank accounts. The treasurer's office has custody of all those accounts.'"

"According to McCarthy, the auditors will reconcile the books between two accounts: the town's standard bank account and a special account set up to handle investments."

"I spent six years as an auditor," McCarthy said. "I think we will welcome them here."

"McCarthy was elected during the General Election held on May 27. He was one of five candidates who ran a sticker campaign because of the sudden death of Lazzaro."

"Because he was out of town on business on the day after the election, McCarthy was not sworn into office until the following Monday, June 3. He has been spending the time since poring over the books and making sure he knows where everything is."

"I'm pulling all of the records from the past year," McCarthy said.

"He noted that as of May 31, the Town had a cash flow balance of $32,173,376.60. This was down $833,255.78 from the same period last year."

"According to McCarthy, the fluctuation is normal."

"I think the cash flow is manageable," he said.

"With a three A rating (Aaa) as opposed to a Triple AAA rating, McCarthy noted the town is in good shape. He was informed at a recent seminar for new Town Treasurers that very few communities the size of Wakefield can achieve the Triple AAA score..."

Stoneham: 'Ready Resources'

"The Town of Stoneham has been awarded $385,000 from the Commonwealth of Massachusetts to fund the local economic development initiative Stoneham Invests," notes the "Stoneham Independent."

"The award, a Ready Resource Fund grant, will fund a new program that the Office of Community Development has developed in cooperation with the Stoneham Chamber of Commerce, the Stoneham Business Roundtable, and two local banks, StonehamBank and Stoneham Savings Bank."

"Stoneham Invests Business Loan Program will make loans available to small businesses that are located in, expanding or opening in Stoneham. The loan pool is $500,000 as a result of the commitments made by the participating banks. Applicants must meet the National Low or Moderate Income guidelines to qualify."

"Stoneham Invests Entrepreneurial Training will be a classroom program for aspiring business people. The two day program will be presented by the Small Business Development Center at a location in Stoneham. The range of topics to be covered will include business law, taxtion, accounting, business finance, marketing, management and human resources."

"Stoneham Invests Technical Assistance will work with local business people to address specific issues and situations affecting their businesses. Topics such as accounting and bookkeeping, management, marketing and promotion (external), human resources, display and promotion (internal), and taxation."

"The Stoneham Invests programs will give us the first major tool in the crafting of a major economic development program that targets the creative industries and also will be in place to assist those who have made an investment in Stoneham."

"For more information about Stoneham Invests, contact either the Stoneham Office of Community Development at 781-279-2697 or the Stoneham Chamber of Commerce at 781-438-0001."

edition of the "Daily Times Chronicle."

"It is neat, attractive, and well built. But within this ordinary house lies an extraordinary story. It has been home to the same family for more than a century."

"Just as Willard Scott announces 100th birthdays on NBC's Today show, the Reading Historical Commission is delighted to announce that the state has designated 265 West Street as a 100-year-old 'Historical Homestead,' the third one in Reading."

"This designation puts Reading in the forefront of Massachusetts communities with such homestead designations. The Secretary of State and the Massachusetts Historical Commission recently awarded the honorary designation to the current owner, Mrs. Eleanor Harris."

"It was her niece, Alice Modica of Reading, who first made the local commission aware that the house had been in continuous family ownership since her grandfather built it in 1896. Then, Reading commission member Virginia Adams pieced together the family story, including a tale of immigration."

"Adams explains, 'The story of the Augustus Surrrette House illustrates Reading's immigration patterns in the late 1800's - a time when many people relocated here from Nova Scotia. Augustus Surrrette came to the U.S. at the age of 18. He was 34 when he arrived in Reading in 1893. Widowed, he had married again and started a family. Within a few years he applied his carpenter skills to build his own home on West Street, completing it in 1896. What he built was a solid, cross-gabled vernacular home suitable to meet the needs of a growing family.'

"The family would include ten children of whom eight survived to adulthood."

"Mr. and Mrs. Surrrette became U.S. citizens and spent the remainder of their lives here on West Street. When Augustus died in 1935, his obituary listed four brothers and four sisters (one residing with him), all living nearby and all having been born in Canada. His parents were buried in Stoneham, indicating the whole family had immigrated. His wife, Louise, also had a brother and sister living in Reading when she passed away in 1956."

"Compiling the scattered bits and pieces of the past revealed hardships others have endured to achieve the American dream," stated Adams....

Boating & You

Things to know before you go

by Tom Lucet

This month of August has been less than optimal for boating and some have found themselves wondering, "Whatever happened to those great days of summer?"

If the dog days of summer have many boaters and ocean-lovers alike worried, as late summer is the start of the hurricane season, as many Floridians are far too aware.

Hurricane Charley left Florida's gulf coast bruised and battered, and the months of September and October could be even more hazardous when it comes to the tropical storms.

Years ago, when many storms happened to strike during the weekend at Salem Willows Yacht Club, my friends and I would sit outside on the deck at the water's edge, watching nearly forty boats bounce and bob atop the massive waves.

Boats which are secured to salt water moorings must have strong and properly secured lines in order to weather a major storm, and the start of hurricane season is a good time for many boaters to check their equipment and make repairs where necessary.

Those who enjoy group boating activities and competitions will be pleased to learn that the Jubilee Yacht Club in Beverly is hosting an upcoming event that is sure to appeal to boat lovers.

Sailboaters who happen to be members of the Mass Bay Sailing Association are encouraged to join the race scheduled to take place on Saturday, September 11.

This very popular day-long "handicap" event requires advance registration, so anyone interested is urged to sign-up soon for the fast-approaching event.

Many find handicap boat racing very interesting, as a 16-foot sail boat is able to compete in

MIDDLESEX EAST SPORTS WEEKLY TRIVIA
Who shares a lifetime batting average in major league baseball with Red Sox great Ted Williams? Answer appears elsewhere in this column.

WOBURN'S MIKE MCLAUGHLIN, a two-way starter at Woburn High School, has made a verbal commitment to play for Boston College next year.

WOBURN'S IAN HUNT will be returning to run for the UMass-Lowell men's cross country team this fall, a fact that helped the team earn a first place rating in the Northeast-10 Conference here in the preseason polls.

STONEHAM'S KEVIN MCCARTHY had a strong showing for himself in the recent Hockey Night in Boston tourney. McCarthy had seven goals and three assists and was one of the top scoring defensemen participating in the tourney.

Need some help on this week's trivia question? The athlete's initials are T.S.

READING'S MIKE CONNELLY is returning to the same race as a 36-foot sailing vessel.

That may not sound overly fair when it comes to the competition, but that's where the race gets interesting; different size boats are assigned varying race routes based on the vessel size.

The registration fee is $55 for the upcoming event. Anyone who is interested in participating can contact Regatta Chairman Dave Smith at 978-922-9933.

Changing gears, many may be pleased to learn that the U.S. Coast Guard Auxiliary hosted their annual barbeque outing at Winter Island Park in Salem earlier this month.

The Division Four members - most of whom are from Middlesex County, including his alma mater this fall just five years after graduating from RMHS to take the reins of the boys cross country team. Since graduating from RMHS in 1999, Connelly attended Babson College, where he served as captain of the men's cross country team in his senior year.

READING'S WADE GAUTHIER is preparing for his sophomore season as a member of United States Naval Academy track team. Gauthier was a three-sport athlete while at RMHS, establishing himself as one of the area's finest runners.

THE MEADOW BROOK MARLINS, based out of the MEADOW BROOK COUNTRY CLUB IN READING, won the annual North Shore Swim League's "Big Meet" for the first time in 25 years when it outscored perennial champion Corinthian Yacht Club, 362-352, recently at Meadow Brook Golf Club.

READING'S RON MARFIONE was a member of the USA Baseball Women's National Team, serving as an assistant coach throughout the world tournament.

WILMINGTON'S ANTHONY MORLANI was a member of the Lightning myself - were among those who took part in the recent outing.

The United States Coast Guard Auxiliary is always seeking new members, and anyone who is interested can contact me personally for enrollment information or the latest news in complimentary boating and piloting classes that are designed to provide citizens with tips for safe boating.

THE READING RAPTORS softball team won the Nor'Easter Classic 14U tournament in Guilford, New Hampshire over the weekend of July 29 through August 1. Adoption Party

From S-1

By the time Bellino met Anthony, the youngster had been living in a foster home for a little more than four years, having been taken from his family when he was five years old. Now, 16 months after Anthony began staying with his future father one or two days a week at first, Anthony calls Bellino's home his own. In fact, later this month, he begins the fifth grade at the West Intermediate School in Wilmington.

"It is rewarding to be able to make a change in a child's life," says Bellino, who, as a child, lived for a few years at the Italian Home for Children, a foster residence in Jamaica Plain. "Anthony is an outgoing child. He's friendly, courteous, caring. He's good friends with a lot of kids."

And he's active too, seizing upon his new, liberated existence with the energy and joy of kids born into a loving home and given the opportunity to play sports, roll dice over a board game, swim in a lake, spend the day with buddies, and take overnight trips to places not seen through the window of a foster home.

While he was under the state's care, Anthony was but one of approximately 3,000 Massachusetts children currently finding themselves in such a situation and hoping to be adopted. According to MARE, nearly 600 of those children do not yet have a family identified for them. Also according to MARE, there are about 130,000 kids across the United States who are in foster care and in need of adoption.

The majority of these children are in foster care because they were either neglected or abused in the homes in which they were born. These kids also come from a variety of backgrounds. Some are the age of school children. Some are brothers or sisters. Some have intellectual, emotional or physical disabilities. All of them reach across the spectrums of age and color.

According to MARE, anyone who wishes to adopt a child must be at least 18 years old. There is not a limit, however, as to how old a potential parent must be. In fact, older, experienced adults frequently prove to be a valuable resource to waiting children.

Single parents, such as Bellino, can adopt too, as can gay and lesbian singles and couples. So can parents with or without other children.

The income level of potential parents only matters to the extent that it must be stable and sizable enough to support a family. Also, in terms of assets, prospective parents need not be homeowners, for many living situations are acceptable for kids, provided they are safe and suitable to the child's needs.

There are not any health requirements for adoptive parents, but physical disabilities and mental conditions could become considerations when deciding what kind of child an adult could most effectively raise.

When adopting through MARE, there is, of course, training and an approval process, called a home study. The good news is that there is little or no cost associated with adopting a child; in fact, adopted children who have special needs are eligible for ongoing financial and medical assistance.

The benefits continue. According to MARE, there are a number of statewide services, such as support groups, respite care, counseling and advocating, that are available to adoptive families.

Massachusetts even offers a college tuition waiver program for children who are adopted from foster homes. Such kids are eligible to attend state colleges tuition-free, provided they meet all admission requirements.

Bellino, as a single man, found his quest to adopt a child to be challenging, even frustrating, at times. At points throughout the 13 years of his quest, Bellino, 41, took an assortment of classes, provided personal and professional references, filled out questionnaires and underwent the aforementioned home study.

"They have to know everything," Bellino says. "They want to have a feeling that you'll be a capable parent."

An article in the June 18, 2004 edition of The Christian Science Monitor suggests that Bellino is one of 5,000 men who became single dads between 1998 and 2001. According to the magazine, the adoption process for men like Bellino has grown increasingly filled with hurdles, especially in the wake of church-related abuse scandals that have made higher the bar they must clear to prove fit for single parenthood.

Sure enough, Bellino asserts that he did encounter adversity from various bureaucrats over the years, leaving him convinced that it is easier for women to adopt than men. With MARE, though, Bellino finally achieved a certain ease in his journey.

"MARE is a great connection for someone looking for a child," he says. "They're a great agency. Whenever you call them, they respond right away. They really help bring connections together."

According to MARE, it is practically impossible to project the length of time that it takes to adopt a waiting child because there are a variety of factors. MARE estimates, however, that it takes an average of one or two years, from the moment parents make their initial inquiry about a child to the time one is officially placed in their new home, sweet home.

Lawton is hoping that those interested in adoption will join the party in Woburn this Saturday. The event has the structure of an open house, she says, so there's no pressure to get to the playground by exactly nine that morning. If you're interested in going to the party, you can call MARE at 1-617-54-ADOPT or 1-800-882-1176 or register on the Internet at www.mareinc.org. Or, as Lawton says, you can simply show up at the party.

There will be other opportunities for potential parents before the year is through. An Annual Foster and Adoptive Family Celebration will be held at the Children's Museum in Boston on Friday, November 5 from 5 p.m. to 9 p.m. A Western Adoption Party will be held at the Kelly School in Holyoke, Massachusetts on Saturday, November 13.

Lawton, for one, particularly enjoys adoption parties and spreading the word about them. It is infinitely rewarding, she says, to so directly and positively impact the life of a child in need.

"These children have gone through a lot," she says. "They've moved around a lot. When they finally do receive the love and stability from a specific family, it's wonderful to be a part of that."

Bellino, a recipient of MARE's ongoing mission, agrees. In fact, he soon hopes to begin a search to bring home a little sister for Anthony.

"Anthony was from Roxbury, a very rough city," he says. "He was cared for in the foster homes, but he didn't have the love of a parent. Nobody hugged him. He could have stayed in the system and gotten up there in age, but I wanted to change a child's life. Adoption gives a child a chance at life."

Officer Gately snapped back with, "Young lady, I don't care who you know - your driver's license photograph shows you wearing GLASSES!"...

I remember when my brothers and sisters and I would SING a song for my mother on MOTHER'S DAY.

"Pal of my CRADLE days, I've needed you always. Since I was a baby upon your knee, you sacrificed everything for me. I STOLE the GOLD from your HAIR, I put SILVER THREADS there. I don't know anyway, I could ever repay, PAL of my CRADLE DAYS."

She shared her love equally with those of us who excelled scholastically or were GIFTED

I thank my LUCKY STARS for the gift of writing poetry and WOODCHIPS and I thank a beautiful Irish woman from Winchester who ENCOURAGED me to KEEP ON WRITING...

A very popular song many years ago went something like this: "STAY AWAY from the DANCING HALLS, the people there are NO GOOD at all. That's where I met your father Bridget, darling."

Now, that song wasn't meant to be funny and the lyrics definitely weren't true - some of the finest people I know are or were fabulous dancers...

Duffy Director at Humpty Dumpty

The Humpty Dumpty School is proud to announce that Jacqueline Duffy has accepted the position of director at the Reading institution.

Duffy spent the past eight years as the director of Pilgrim Nursery School in Lexington, and she is a validator with the National Association for the Education of Young Children.

She is also involved with many committees associated with the Boston Association for the Education of Young Children.

With over 25 years of experience, Duffy brings a professional dedication of quality in early childcare.

The Humpty Dumpty School offers full and part-time care for children ages two and nine months to seven years, with a full day kindergarten program available. The school's flexible hours are from 7:00 a.m. to 5:45 p.m. daily.

Local parents are invited to meet the school's newest team member, Jacqueline Duffy, at the Humpty Dumpty School, located at 174 Lowell Street in Reading, or call for a tour at 781-944-3049.

The Humpty Dumpty School can be found online at www.humptydumptyschool.com.

The Reading Extended-Day Activities Program (REAP, Inc.) will have a new home beginning with the 2004-2005 school year.

The REAP staff and directors Brenda DiPasquale and Peggy

Commuto are excited to announce their new venture inside the Humpty Dumpty School, located at 174 Lowell Street in Reading.

REAP staff credited the school's owner, Rhonda Shear, for her generosity in enabling the after-school program to continue to offer a multitude of services to local families.

The School Care will operate from 7:00 a.m. to 8:00 a.m. at the Killam and Joshua Eaton Elementary Schools in Reading.

Students attending Reading's Birch Meadow and Woods End schools may attend the before-school program at Killam and they will then be transported to their respective schools in time for the first bell of the day.

The Kindergarten Surround Care Program will operate at 174 Lowell Street.

This program provides before, after and extended day care for kindergarten students who are not attending the full day session but require care while their parents are at the office.

After school care for children in the kindergarten through age 13 will also operate at 174 Lowell Street.

At the end of the school day, children will be transported to REAP and they'll be given the opportunity to do their homework, work on art projects, play computer games, and play outdoors.

ABC's of avoiding allergies at school

Their noses may be tinier, but kids can sneeze, sniffle and wheeze just as much as adults. At home, parents can clean their child's bedroom until it's dust-free, but that's a little harder to do at school — a child's home away from home. As your child enters the world of finger-painting, fractions and fiction, he or she must also contend with a classroom of potential allergy traps.

You can eliminate some unnecessary suffering by teaching your child the ABCs and 1-2-3s of avoiding allergy irritants at school. (Be sure to also notify your child's teachers about his or her condition so that they are aware of the situation.) Before the school year begins, teach your child these tips.

Defibrillator is now part of karate school

WILMINGTON - The Academy of Traditional Karate announced today that they have taken steps to increase chances of surviving a sudden cardiac arrest, by placing an AED (Automated External Defibrillator) in their school. Every year, sudden cardiac arrests claim the lives of at least 250,000 people. The only known treatment for sudden cardiac arrest is the use of a defibrillator, which uses a powerful electric shock to stop the abnormal heart rhythm and allow the heart to return to a more normal beating pattern. Survival rates for sudden cardiac arrest are less than 2% when defibrillation is delayed ten minutes or more.

"Our goal is to protect the lives of our students and families, as well as the surrounding businesses around our facility," said Todd Keane, owner and head instructor of the Academy of Traditional Karate. "Having the AED on-site increases access to early defibrillation and helps us save lives."

Unlike models of defibrillators intended for use by health care professionals, AEDs do not require extensive medical knowledge to understand or operate. The expertise needed to analyze the heart's electrical function is programmed into the device, and enables ordinary people to provide treatment to victims of sudden cardiac arrest. A four-hour training session, covering both AEDs and Cardiopulmonary Resuscitation (CPR) is all that is necessary to learn how to use the device. The Academy of Traditional Karate has had 12 of their instructors/personnel complete this course, and are ready to intervene should an unfortunate event occur.

The LIFEPAK CR Plus AED, manufactured by Medtronic provides clear voice prompts that instruct the user to attach the electrodes and then stay clear while the device automatically analyzes the person's heart rhythm. If needed, the user is prompted to remain clear and deliver the lifesaving defibrillation shock. For more information on sudden cardiac arrest or automated external defibrillators, go to www.aedhelp.com.

The Academy of Traditional Karate teaches Okinawan self defense and has been part of the Wilmington community for over 15 years. We strive on building confidence, improving self-discipline, self-esteem and the ability to focus, as well as teaching safety skills and self defense techniques necessary for both adults and children of all ages. Please contact Todd or Kristen Keane at the Academy at (978) 658-2077 or visit our website at www.traditionalkarate.com for more information regarding our programs.

School Notes

by Phyllis Nissen

BEFORE, DURING, AND AFTER CLASS

On with the new (Tewksbury)

"Starting in the fall, the John F. Ryan School's Extended Day program will be, well, extended to include a Before School program," notes the "Tewksbury Town Crier."

"Cynthia Bastieri, the community service director for Tewksbury Public Schools, conducted a survey, relating to a potential before-school program, of the parents/guardians with children who will be attending the Ryan School in September. She received 22 favorable responses. Feedback from the school's administration and staff was also positive.

"Operating hours for the Before School Program will run from 7 a.m. to 8 a.m. daily, at a weekly cost to parents and guardians of $25. Parents and guardians may, instead, take advantage of a 3-day program for a reduced cost of $20 weekly.

"The staff of the Extended Day Program will see an increase in their pay for the first time in four years.

"Bastieri has proposed a 3 percent increase for all three positions held within the program. According to Bastieri, 3 percent is the average increase in other contracted groups in the district. A 3 percent increase could also be granted without having to raise tuition rates.

"Currently, an Extended Day Site Director receives $25 hourly and would be bumped up to $25.75 with the proposed increase. Teachers, currently at $20 hourly, would receive $20.60. Aides would see an increase from $12.50 to $12.88 under the new plan."

When an override fails (Winchester example)

"The main impact of the failed override at McCall Middle School is largely the reduction in staff, students' schedules and class sizes, according to principal Evander French," notes the Winchester edition of the "Daily Times Chronicle."

"French was asked by the School Committee to present a report on the effects the budget reductions will have on the next school year.

"The most difficult impact is the people impact," he said. The middle school will be losing two core teachers and see reductions in the staff hours in five out of the six exploratory courses, he said. "We have some tough choices to make," French added.

"The other main effect will be on the students' schedules that include more study halls, especially in grades 6 and 8. 'Last year we were very close to being a free study hall middle school. We are far from that this year,' said French, who explained that too many study halls do not synchronize with the energetic and creative nature of the middle schooler. Though study halls can be used for homework, two study halls in one day does not make any sense, French explained.

"Also, the lack of teachers will mean less sections and, therefore, larger classes that will grow from their current average of 20 students to 24 on average. 'There will be some classes of 27, 28 or 29,' he added.

"With enrollment growing and staff reduction, French expressed concern about the future if this pattern continues. 'A couple of years down the road we are going to start seeing larger classes,' he said.

"Staff reductions also mean larger loads for teachers. Currently, there are 90 students per team. The new configuration would increase to 116 students. 'That's dramatic to any teacher,' French said.

"A series of programmatic changes would also occur in the Art, Computer Education, Family and Consumer Sciences, Music, Physical/Health Education and Technology/Engineering courses...."

Moving ahead (Lynnfield honorees)

"When school ended in June, hundreds of students and teachers eagerly set out to begin summer vacation," notes the "Lynnfield Villager."

"However, for three Lynnfield Middle School faculty members, June 22 signified more than just the end of the school year; it was the end of their careers in Lynnfield.

"Carol Damon, Ann Marie Baden and Sara Gallet all retired from the Middle School at the end of the year.

"Damon was a Special Education teacher in the Lynnfield Public Schools since September of 1974.

"It's been wonderful," Damon said of her lengthy career.

"Arriving in Lynnfield shortly after receiving her master's degree in Special Education from Boston College, Damon applied to Lynnfield due to its close affiliation with the graduate school.

"The town was in the process of enacting a brand-new Special Education program, making it the perfect time for Damon to begin at the Center School.

"Working under the direction of Denise Christian, the Coordinator of Special Education at the elementary school (grades 1-3), Damon remembers how in those early days, the Resource Room was the main outlet for students who needed her instruction.

"Damon and her colleague, Judi Lucia, developed programs and materials to teach the children phonics and math. The students who came to the Resource Room from their regular class would work with the teachers in small groups.

"We had very little materials in the beginning," she remembered. "We were always looking for new ways to work with regular education to help our students."

"In the late 1970s, the school received word that it would be closing its doors, leading Damon to move onto a position at the Junior High School. The Center School, built in 1895, was demolished to make way for Centre Village elderly housing.

"I was ready for something new," Damon said. "A whole different world existed just a few miles down the road...."

Allergies from S-8

stay away from dust breeders such as chalkboards, chalkboard erasers, bookcases, mats, and closets. While it's impossible to completely avoid them, encourage your child to minimize contact with these areas and items as much as possible.

• Find out if there's a pet in the classroom. If your child is allergic to it, get him switched to another classroom. If it is impossible to switch rooms, remind him or her to sit as far from the animal as possible and limit contact with it.

• Tell your child to exercise caution during art and science classes, which frequently use chemicals, glue and paint. Exposure to these products can trigger an allergy.

• If your son or daughter is carpoled to school, make sure that the car windows are kept closed so that pollen doesn't get trapped in the car.

• Discourage your child from playing outdoors on days when pollen counts are especially high. (You might need to talk to his teacher about having an indoor recess or his physical education teacher about having an indoor gym class if such activities are held outside on high-pollen-count days.)
